

Caroline Moore & Jonathan Sorrell

There's always a lot of organisation that goes into planning a wedding and for Caroline there was more than most – she had to convert to the Jewish faith before she could marry Jonathan. She had always dreamed of celebrating her wedding in the garden of her parents' home in Sevenoaks in Kent and as Jewish law allows couples to marry at home, they were able to have all of the celebrations under one roof. Their Sunday wedding started with a 12.30pm service followed by lunch at 2pm, with the last guests leaving at about 8pm. "We decided to start early and finish early as lots of our guests had to work the next day," says Caroline.

Theme: "I love pink roses so we let the colour scheme evolve from there," says Caroline. Her mum had loads of great ideas and suggested the pink and white striped lining for the reception marquee by Dover Marquee (0800 970 0231). It was also her mum's idea to introduce purple accents. To help them, they enlisted the expertise of event planner Alternative Occasions (01932 872115, www.stressfreeday.com/www.stressfreehire.com). "Liz and Doug were so helpful," she says. "They suggested options that we wouldn't even have realised were available to us."

Outfits: Caroline wore an ivory silk dress with a tulle overlay and long train and a floor-length ▶